

Famous Inventors Thomas Edison

Thomas Edison, born in 1847, was a troublemaker in school. He got poor grades and didn't listen to the teacher. Instead, he would daydream. He would dream about interesting things he could make. He hated school so much that his mother began home-schooling him when he was 10 years old.

Edison was most interested in learning how things were put together and how they worked. He became a great student when he was able to study what interested him.

Thomas Edison went on to become a very famous inventor. He invented the light bulb, the electric motor, the microphone, a talking doll and the typewriter. Edison also helped to invent the movie camera. But, that wasn't all. Edison created over 1000 new things. His home in Florida is now a museum.
